

Immigrant Defense Project (IDP) fights for the human rights of immigrants in the criminal legal and immigration systems. IDP works to end mass deportation via strategies that attack these two interconnected systems at multiple points, including through impact litigation, advocacy, communications, and community defense.

For the past four years, IDP has extensively monitored and trained communities to challenge Immigration & Customs Enforcement (ICE) raids and arrests. Combining expertise on criminal-immigration law and specialized monitoring of ICE activity, IDP has created a suite of comprehensive materials in multiple languages to support individuals and campaigns to keep families together.

Updated and expanded to account for conditions under Trump (through Aug. 2017), IDP's set of ICE raids and arrests resources offer community members, advocates, organizers, and policy-makers definitive information on ICE's tactics and practices, the risks and triggers for being targeted for ICE arrests, and ways to protect communities across the country.
